Organized German Resistance in West Is Dissolving

Germany's strategic positions on the Western front are being liquidated with amazing rapidity, every hour giving fresh proof that the organized Hitlerite resistance on a major scale in that great theatre is a thing of the past.

However, there still remain big jobs for Supreme Commander Eisenhower's forces to do, and among the most important of these are the liberation of Holland; and the capture of the Reich's North Sea ports of Bremen, Emden and Hamburg. Indications now are that the Boche will try to withdraw from most of Holland but will make a stand in the great commercial ports of Amsterdam and Rotterdam. Just as they plan to hang onto their own North Sea harbors.

The point of the German resistance at these places is the same old story, of depriving the Allies of the use of the ports and thus causing delay. That is to say, the Germans can't strengthen their own grave position materially but may save off the day of execution a bit.

The Germans are withdrawing, and have withdrawn many of their troops from Holland already, and British forces are smashing northward along the Rhine river towards Emden to close the gap along the Dutch-German border through which the Nazis are escaping. Undoubtedly the great majority of the Nazi forces have got out, but the Germans are expected to retain several divisions to make a stand at Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

Garrisons holding these two great Dutch cities will be suicide forces, that is, they will be expected to hang on so long as possible without hope of escape. This has been a favorite trick of the Nazis as withess the fact that they still are holding several isolated harbors, including Lorient and St. Nazare, while most of capture in the time of the invasion of Normandy. Probably the same scheme will be followed at Bremen, Emden, Hamburg and other important North Sea harbors.

From the Canadian forces which are driving northward into Holland in the Deventer sector, we learn that apart from all other difficulties, the Boche have been stripping Holland of food and shipping it into Germany. The Hitlerites have been stopping shipments of food from the agricultural areas of Holland to great cities like Amsterdam, Rotterdam and the Hague and have utilized it for their own purposes.

Thus Holland is in dire need of relief. That will be provided at the earliest possible moment, but from the front today comes the warning that Allied forces cannot be expected to liberate the Dutch cities overnight. Indeed it may take some time to get Germans carry out their plan of making Dunkerques out of places like Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

Another highly important reason for clearing Holland is to wipe out the launching sites of the V-bombs which the Germans have been sending against London and other British cities, with devasting effect. That is one of the tasks in which the Canadians now are engaged, and it would appear that great success already has been achieved, since for about a week go up in the air like a fourth of July rocket over trivial details.

The general keeps a thermos jug of hot coffee handy in his conference room and he and his staff generally themselves a cup whenever they wish. In conferences on future strategy, he sits with his staff in deep, easy chairs before a huge wall map of the western front in his own office and he points out possible objectives and tactical moves with a long ruler. He never lets his voice and his invariable approach to the execution of an order is to ask, "Can you do this?" instead of a peremptory, "Do this." And no officer I know of can listen to Bradley's gentle "Can you do this?" without answering, "I can."

Under a table behind his desk he keeps a case of popular American soft drinks for visitors. He has two telephones on his desk. One is for conversations over regular army channels. The other is an emergency telephone which he can pick up and in 15 seconds talk to Gen. Eisenhower or either of his two chief separate army commanders — Hodges and Patton.

On more than one occasion since he took over command of American troops on the western front, Bradley has found it necessary to relieve from leadership some officer inefficient or temperamentally unsuited for his post.

This has been one of the hardest things on him personally of all his duties," said one man close to him. "Some of these men were old army friends from the days of peace. But much as it hurts him, Gen. Bradley never has hesitated to remove any man he felt was unqualified."

On the other hand he promptly rewards men who shine in battle without regard to army politics. An officer who landed in Normandy under him as a colonel commanding a regiment exceeded all expectations in combat. Now he is a major general commanding a division. Another example is Brig. Gen. Hogue, builder of the Alcan highway. It was Hogue who made the lightning decision to seize and cross the Ludendorff bridge at Remagen, which gave the Allies their first bridgehead across the Rhine. Gen. Bradley immediately stepped him up in command by giving him an armored division which even now is plunging deeply into Germany as one of the forward spearheads.

Zweolfaxing, 1 1-2 miles from the city limits, was captured yesterday, Moscow announced.

Striking from the south, Marshal Fedor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian Army seized more than 30 communities in the vicinity of Vienna, including Zwolfaxing, just seven and a half miles from the center of the capital.

While capturing Bratislava other of Malinovsky's troops advanced eight to 10 miles north and west of the Slovakian city along a 100-mile front, Moscow said.

Soviet forces captured 4,600 men Tuesday in this offensive, the Russian high command declared.

Almost 100 miles due south of Vienna, other Russian troops fighting shoulder to shoulder with Bulgarian units drove the last German and Hungarian salient and fought in the area between Graz and Mariboi to within 78 miles of Italian frontier.

The Moscow communique said 10 towns were taken yesterday in this drive and 9,000 Germans were captured Tuesday.

The swift capture of Bratislava, a large river port 50 miles east of Vienna on the Danube and a manufacturing center that has supplied the German with important chemicals and ammunition, upset German plans to hold the area southeast as a shield for Vienna.

Meanwhile, to the north the Berlin radio said Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's First White Russian Army was about to launch a powerful assault from Oder and Neisse river bases toward a junction with American forces striking at Berlin from the west.

Official silence in Moscow shrouded developments in this area fronting on Berlin, but field dispatches said the big Russian offensive was near at hand.

sumed deliberations with his cabinet until noon. Among the principal matters under discussion, these broadcasts said, were plans for rice production in the 1945 fiscal year.

The dramatic announcement of the cabinet's resignation followed soon after, however.

The Koiso cabinet came under particularly heavy fire of elder Japanese political leaders, including a number of former premiers and members of both houses of the Japanese Diet, following the start of B-29 raids on Japan.

These leaders pressed for a more vigorous prosecution of the war, including total mobilization of Japan's manpower and resources, and openly criticized what it called the laxity of the Koiso cabinet.

The government took a number of steps toward meeting the demands and appeared to have satisfied the critics up to the time of the invasion of Okinawa.

from Berlin.

A Dispatch from British Army headquarters last night said the British 11th Armored Division had crossed the Weser river northeast of Osnabrueck and plunged on beyond against light opposition, the same correspondent, however, wirelessed today that the 11th Armored Division "which crossed the Weser-Ems canal yesterday, after capturing three bridges intact, now was seven miles northwest of Minden." The Weser curves to the northeast at Minden. There was no confirmation at supreme headquarters of the reported Weser river crossing.

The British fought into the western outskirts of Minden, 96 miles southwest of Hamburg and 47 south of the naval base of Bremen. They had made another breakthrough and swept 25 miles past Osnabrueck in a single day to reach the Weser, the next to last river before Berlin. Only the Elbe lies between the Weser and Berlin.

Large cities toppled; more were on the verge of capture.

Seized last yesterday were Kassel (217,000), Gotha (48,000), Suhl (16,000), Hengelo (40,000) and Waltrop.

The Ninth Army, sending four of its infantry divisions into a side campaign to crush in the northern flank of the Ruhr box where up to 150,000 Nazis and perhaps field Marshal Albert Kesselring are trapped, fought into Soest and battled the last of defenders of Hamm. They moved a bare five miles from Dortmund (537,000) on two sides.

The last Germans were being beaten out of Wuerzburg (108,61) and Heilbronn (60,000) by the Seventh Army, which fought less than 34 miles from Nuerriberg (611,000). The French fought beyond captured Karlsruhe to within 20 miles of Stuttgart (460,000).

The Third Army mopped up Wuerzburg pockets and citadel and left behind in its advances to within 58 miles of Czechoslovakia and 160 miles of Russian lines.

The cities of Eisenach (45,000) and Muhlhausen were entered. The Third Army captured 16,454 prisoners yesterday. In the past two weeks, supreme headquarters said, 280,000 Nazis have surrendered.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's red hot Third Army, more than 215 miles inside Germany, spent most of its energy consolidating gains of the past 24 days, in which 63,606 prisoners have been taken by this army alone.

The Fourth Armored (Breakthrough) Division turned south from its latest conquest at Gotha, an airplane producing center, and cleared Ohrdruf, seven miles below the city. The Sixth Armored Division stabbed north into Muhlhausen, 35 miles northwest of Weimar, birthplace of the German republic.

The 69th Division, mopping up behind the tanks, pushed to Altengottern, five miles southeast of Muhlhausen.

Daring Yank Patrol Escapes From Japs by Hiding, Rubber Boat and All, in Seaside Cave

By FRED HAMPTON

With the Twenty - Fourth Division in the Philippines — (AP) — A four-man patrol containing Sgt. Dave Boland was on the 4th day it had obtained the information about Japanese strength and positions on Simara island needed before an Amphibious assault could be launched. But at the moment of withdrawal it had been discovered.

Simara is a pin-point island: Escape in daylight was impossible and there wasn't much of any place to hide.

Thoris, until Boland, whose home is at Portland, Ore., found the cave.

Boland and the boys reached Simara in darkness, stealthily reconnoitered the whole place.

"We found the Japs, counted 30, pinpointed their installations and bivouacs," he explained. "On our way back to the beach to take the information to the staff on the 19th regiment — which was to land on the island and clean out the Nips — we skirted a village. We ran into a group of Japs being housed by some large blond men. They talked. Nip and were superficially friendly. They were stolen from the Filipinos.

"We went along all right for us, until some dogs got our scent. We had to cut out for the beach with the Nips after us.

"When we slid down the bank on the beach I tumbled into the cave —just at sea level. It didn't look like a hiding place but it was; the only one. With our rubber boat we entered.

"Before the Japs found the cave mouth the tide came up and covered it. We perched up on rocks above the water line and sweated out the Japs and the tide. Toward dusk I swam under water out beyond the surf for a look around. The Japs were scrambling around the hill hunting us. But just before dark they left and when the tide lowered we got the boat out, ran the surf and escaped."

With the aid of their information the battalion assaulted Simara three days later and captured it, killing all of the more than 100 Japs with virtually no losses. The "rail bound mort" had disappeared —apparently escaped to another island in a small boat.

Boland's three companions were patrol leader First Lt. James Farrell, Cuthbert, Ga., Pfc. Henry Knoxsah, Powhatan, Kas.; Pfc. Howard Dennison, Chochise, Ariz.

Less nerve - wracking but equally successful was the reconnaissance led by First Lt. R. B. Beach, Bellingham, Wash., before a similar assault on Romblon island, in the mid-Philippines — also by the 19th Regiment.

Beach's party scoured Romblon for two days, got all information needed on enemy strength and positions, and withdrew undetected. Once they lay for two hours on a hill above Romblon town within 200 yards of the Nip garrison headquarters building.

When the island was assaulted in force almost 80 Japanese were wiped out with the loss to us of one man.

Others on Beach's patrol were Sgt. Joseph Soo, Jr., 1801 East Chicago, Ind.; Pfc. Kenneth Lee Roseh, 215 W. 24th St., Wilmington, Del.

New University of Arkansas Board in Organization Meet

Little Rock, April 5—(AP)—Herbert L. Thomas, Fayetteville, was elected chairman of the University of Arkansas board of trustees, succeeding J. G. Ragsdale, El Dorado, at the first meeting of the reorganized board here today.

Thomas, president of the Pyrex Mill Lift Truck Company here, reappointed to the board by Governor Laney March 2. He will serve as chairman two years. Henry S. Neal, El Dorado, was appointed, as named vice-chairman.

Governor Laney and his executive secretary, W. J. Smith, and University President Dr. A. M. Harding met with the board this morning. The meeting was to be concluded this afternoon.

Holdover trustees are W. W. Sharpe, Brinkley; Raymond Orr, Fort Smith, P. E. Murphy, Junction City, and John Clinton Black, Justices, to recommend adjustments. These could include revision of treaties and prior decisions.

With less than two weeks in which to work before they leave for San Francisco, delegation members intend to tackle most of the controversial questions that have arisen in connection with the conference.

They probably will attempt to reach an American position on the small nations complaints, as set forth in a memorandum from the Netherlands government. Also before them will be questions raised by the Russian government, although their stand on the Soviet proposal for multiple voting apparently was foreclosed by President Roosevelt's promise of support at Yalta.

Flood Damage Mounts in E. Arkansas

Little Rock, April 5 (AP)—The Red Cross estimated today that about 145,000 persons in 16 flood - stricken eastern Arkansas farm area had been inundated and some 1,500 families suffered the loss of their homes as army and civilian work crews continued their fight to save the levees on the White, St. Francis and Cache rivers.

Chilly weather had settled over most of the state and the only stream reported above flood stage was White, which was still climbing at Newport where it was seven feet above the 26 foot flood stage.

Thomas B. Smith, regional Red Cross director in the St. Louis area, has established relief headquarters at Brinkley and Helena. He said that all of 15,000 families inmne eastern counties were forced to flee their homes ouated from the flood area. The counties are Cross, Lee Phillips, Prairie, Mississippi, St. Francis, Woodruff, Craighead and Poinsett.

No homes have been destroyed to date, Smith saidi.

Another critical section was the Lafayette-Miller county area where about 30,000 acres were flooded by overflowing Red and Sulphur rivers and more than 1,000 persons were evacuated.

While the water has caused no known loss of life in Arkansas thus far, Red Cross and local public health officials were making an intensive check of guard against sickness among flood victims.

Dr. Raymond Barnes, medical and health adviser for the Red Cross midwestern area was making a tour of the state and was in Prairie county today.

With a sharp change in the weather the state was in the 48 hour respite from rainfall but estimates of flood damage continued to mount.

Vandenberg Proposal May Be Accepted

By JACK BELL
Washington, April 5 —(AP)— Senator Vandenberg's proposal that a projected new peace - keeping league have power to review wartime boundary and similar decisions appeared headed today for official American approval.

The Michigan Republican and other members of this country's delegation to San Francisco begin daily sessions Monday in search of a policy agreement on controversial questions likely to come before the United Nations conference April 25.

Along with amendments proposed by other nations to the Dumbarton Oaks formula for world security, the delegation is expected to take up a series of suggestions filed with the State Department by Vandenberg.

Among these he has suggested that the projected security council be authorized to investigate any dispute which may lead to international friction and, where it finds injustices, to recommend adjustments.

We, the Women

Homecoming is More Vital Than Heroism to Women
By RUTH MILLETT

"That's very nice," the mother of a returned soldier said when she was told her boy had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

"That's nice," she said again when she was given an account of her son's bravery and daring. But when she was told he was coming home on leave—she really got excited.

That was big news to her—important news. Her son was coming home for the first leave after years of fighting.

"He's coming home," is always the big event for women who have waited and worried while their men faced the dangers and hardships of war. Women are interested in the experiences of their men folk, but what they distinguish themselves by bravery, heroism and shine it is when they hear that their son or husband has been decorated.

"He's not coming home!" That is the only really important fact for a woman while her son or husband is in uniform. All the rest is relatively unimportant, secondary and trivial.

WAITING IS TOUGH

Here's probably not a woman in the country who loved ones who are in the service of mother loves him who wouldn't have rejected as did the mother of the hero. "That's nice," to the news that her son had won the Medal of Honor but sobbed with happiness when she was told, "He's coming home."

It's nice that a man a hero, but it's wonderful to know that he's waiting and worrying and over and that at last he is coming home.

That is a woman's honest reaction to war.

State Development Body Is Completed; Terry Gets a Place

Little Rock, April 5 —(AP)— Completion of organization of the new State Resources and Development Commission within a few days is expected following appointment yesterday of former Congressman David D. Terry, Little Rock, to head the flood control, water and soil conservation divisions.

Appointment of Terry was announced by Commission Chairman B. T. Pooks, Camden, who said the other directors would be named this week.

Appointments previously announced included: Fred Lang, director of forestry and parks division; Glenn A. Greene, director of publicity division; H. G. Thatcher, head of the agricultural economics division, and Col. Hendrix Lackey, executive director.

The Resources and Development Commission was created by the 1945 legislature in a consolidation of various state departments dealing with natural resources.

Senators Are Butt of Fun at Press Fete

By TOM REEDY

Washington, April 5 — (AP) — Eleven senators let their hair down last night, what they looked like.

These "freshmen" members of the Senate were guests of the National Press Club.

They sat on a stage, introduced each other amid much ribaldry and generally raised heck. It was extremely entertaining, which seemed everyone. That was what it was supposed to be.

This was the biennial introduction of the new senators to the Washington press corps.

The legislators took it pretty good, in front of almost a thousand watchers. They gave each other the works, and the audience cheered. They made fun of themselves.

Briefly, they unbent.

They unbent so far that Senator Taylor (D-Ida), his wife and youngster got up and danced a jig to some corny songs. Senator Donnell (R-Mo) played the guitar worse than anybody ever has, perhaps, and four guys in the crowd sang "My Wild Irish Rose."

There was only one disapproving note. Senator Myers (D-Pa) complained that there were no pretty pass when senators can't remember the words to "Sweet Adeline."

The program was "supposed" to be broadcast over the radio," announcer for CBS, made it seem real enough. But the broadcast paid no attention to time however and finally Jack Bell, who was in charge, passed a note.

"Where do you think you are, in the movies?"

Senator Morse (R-Ore) read the note aloud and said he'd obey, not sure or not cameras, and for once he'd stop being so windy. It was a salutory note.

There was a great sign of relief however when Vickers pulled a plug at the end of the wise cracks and said, what do you know, we weren't on the air all the time!

Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky proved to be a natural. He let down dot's and don'ts for the new members of the Senate.

"The old senators and senators," Barkley said, "and these two groups are numerous, have never heard anyone talk more and say less.

"It's futile to instruct the old members, and for that matter, the new ones. Just mind your own business.

"Don't pose at pianos.

"Don't practice before you become a habit.

"Avoid self-publicity.

"Beware of telephone calls from the White House calling you to a conference. The first words they'll say is, 'Is your wife present?'

"Don't ask advice and you'll not only be different, you'll be a queer bird."

The introductions were lulus.

Senator Hickenlooper (R-Ia) was introduced as the senator who knows that people remember the name of the last person they met.

Senator Saltonstall (R-Mass), it was suggested, was so successful at home that now whenever he hears a clap of thunder he runs to the window and takes a bow.

Senator Smith (R-Wyo) was presented, badly, as the man inspecting the hair restorer firm to sponsor broadcasts.

Three-hat William Wasson of Fulbright (D-Ark), on hat to keep tossing in the political ring, one to wear, and one to talk through, the lightness. It refreshes and tones the scalp, an ideal massage implement for the numb, tingling or burning sensation. Relieves pain since in muscle-or cramp-like pains in the legs. Use Fulbright's Mother's Friend—the balm lubricant. Try it tonight.

Mother's Friend
Highly praised by users, many doctors recommend the use of Fulbright's Mother's Friend—the balm lubricant. Try it tonight.

AN UNWILLING TOOL?
XVI

I went back down into the cellar. Eric had just finished putting coal on the fire and Charley was standing by the corridor entrance scratching his chin thoughtfully.

"Look." He pointed beyond the coal-bin to a door that I had not noticed before. Apparently it gave access to the south wing of the house. "We found a bed in there, Nick, recently slept in, some cigarette butts, and a pair of sport shoes."

"Phineas?" I looked carefully at Eric's feet. I had never noticed them before. They were big, but not really enough to make the footprints I had seen. I went through to the room and looked at the pair of cigarette assailed my nostrils. There was a pair of brown suede sport shoes, big as Eric's own boats. The maker's name was plainly visible: Blakely and Hodgson. They made a good shoe.

There were nothing else in the room besides the bed —not even a window. Evidently, this space had been used for storage and our intruder had utilized it for the simple expedient of storing his big-footed body by night.

When we got back upstairs Eric put a cup of black coffee for me.

"It's the best I could do, darling," he smiled comfortingly.

"You've a jaded look."

"Thanks, Pat." I took the coffee, but it was strong and bracing. I couldn't get it down.

"It was all over from this morning and I heated it over," apologized Pat. "Maybe I shouldn't have."

"Pat, my love," Brenda remarked "many a maiden has languished in spinsterhood till death for less."

"There could be worse fates," replied Pat lightly.

Charley and I sat on the rocks in front of The Ledges. The sun was high and the warmth of it swarmed through my jacket. The air was so still that the smoke from our cigarets hung almost motionless before me. Pat and Brenda had taken the station wagon and driven to Minot for provisions and at the last moment Eric with his self-assured civility had tagged along to do some errands of his own.

"Tramps don't wear Blakely and Hodgon shoes," Charley reflected.

"Why would anyone want to sleep in that stuffy hole in the cellar?" I asked.

"For concealment. It's a beautiful little hide-out." Charley tossed a stone into a moss- green pool. "And you almost stumbled into it, yourself."

"I didn't stumble. I was on the hunt."

Charley looked at me oddly and told him about the intruder in my room last night and the big footprints on the cellar floor and mornings footprints. He finished, he leaned his back against the rock and locked his hands behind his head.

"Nick, has it seemed to you that the whole atmosphere since we've been here at The Ledges has been—well—rather theatrical?"

"Phony, you mean?"

"I suppose that's what I mean. Doesn't it seem odd that Phineas Hudson was so anxious to get down here the moment he heard about your plan to rusticate here?"

"Pat's plan," I corrected him.

"Mr. Hudson explained," went on, "that he is here only because he is distressed about Pat's involvement in this mess I appear to be in."

"But Pat wouldn't have come down here at all if it hadn't been for her father's cunning down," Charley pointed out.

I hadn't thought of that. Phineas Hudson was the last man I would suspect of guile. He had no need for it. Or had he?

"And the Temples," continued Charley, "what are they doing here? And Eric Wooll?"

"And the guy with a shotgun?" I added. "I concluded dryly, "I don't believe it was Wooll."

"And Charley," Mr Bruce Temple, for that matter."

"You certainly don't think it was Phineas Hudson?"

He didn't answer immediately. Then he said:

"Maybe indirectly. Didn't Pat suggest that you go down to fix the fire this morning?"

"Look, Charley," I said. "Get this straight: if I thought Pat Hudson was trying to murder me, I'd be out hunting for the best criminal lawyer in the country to get her off. As for provisions for that matter,"

Pepsi-Cola Scholarship Test April 16

Senior students of Hope High School, along with seniors of other Hempstead county high schools, will be given an aptitude test on April 16 by principals of local high schools in the competition for the four-year college scholarship offered by Pepsi-Cola company.

Each Senior Class has chosen the five percent of their own number (whom they (the Seniors) think most likely to succeed in life. The aptitude test to be given this five percent has been prepared by a committee of college presidents. After having the tests to students papers will be forwarded to Princeton University for grading.

Students compete by states. There are separate contests for white and colored students. Two white and one colored student from each southern state will receive a four-year Pepsi-Cola college scholarship.

Winning students may attend any college in the United States desired by the student and permitted by scholastic credentials. Pepsi-Cola Company will pay transportation at three cents per mile round trip one time each year for four years from the home of the student to the college. Pepsi-Cola will also pay tuition, fees and $25.00 per month for living costs toward board, room and other expenses.

There are no contingencies . . . nothing to buy, nothing to sell, no bottle tops to save, no theme to write about Pepsi-Cola or anything else. The purpose of Pepsi-Cola Company in this effort is to encourage and assist financially one hundred and eighteen American boys and girls who hold promise of leadership and success.

Ticket Sale for Minstrel Opens Briskly

On Tuesday of this week, the very first day of ticket sales, there were many tickets sold. The enthusiasm at the club was at such a high pitch that not only did every member of the club buy five tickets but by Tuesday night one of the members had sold 25. This year the entire proceeds of the Forty five Minstrel will go toward the erection of a new building for Boys and Girls Building for Hope. The seating capacity of our High School Auditorium, where the Minstrel is to be staged, is limited and the management frankly states that only enough tickets will be sold to accomodate two performances.

Twenty Kiwanis Queen Candidates were announced yesterday and since then Miss Lorene Hair is sponsored by the O.K. Barber Shop, making the twenty-first.

Production Director Lavin further announces that there will be a complete accounting of tickets on every day morning and results announced from the stubs deposited at Crescent Drug Store.

Rehearsals are progressing nicely and there is no doubt that an outstanding feature of this show will be forty of Hope's leading business men on the stage.

Yes Sir, IT'S PERFECTLY NATURAL

Preference for Chilean Nitrate is Just as Natural as the Product Itself

Doubly Lucky...Pep brings home a soldier son on furlough, and natural nitrate to side dress the crops.

Good farmers—for over a hundred years—have hauled natural nitrate for their crops. Since 1830, when the first nitrate cargo arrived from Chile, millions of tons have been used on American farms . . . 3,300,000 tons since the outbreak of the war. This year's supply of Chilean Nitrate depends largely on ships available to bring it in. If everyone takes his share promptly when offered, at least 850,000 tons can be supplied for this year's crops.

While some nitrate normally goes into mixed fertilizer, most of it is applied direct to the crop—top dressing for grains and grasses, side dressing for corn and cotton. Direct application to fruit and vegetable crops is vital to yield and quality.

Chilean Nitrate is quick-acting inorganic nitrogen. It is immediately soluble in normal soil moisture. It is all available to the crop But beyond all this, Chilean Nitrate is natural . . . the only natural nitrate in the world. Because of its natural origin, Chilean Nitrate of Soda contains, in addition to large proportions of nitrogen and sodium, small amounts of boron, iodine, manganese, copper—34 different elements in all—many of which are known to be essential to healthy plant growth.

Good farmers the world over have learned by experience to prefer Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda. In experiments, test plots and in the field, it has demonstrated its worth. It is the safe, sure nitrate for your crops.

Sorry to Meddle . . . Sorry to Use Natural Chilean Nitrate comes in two forms—Champion brand and Old Style. If nature you is the mechanical variables, in even-weight bags, for easy storage and handling.

Draft Threat to Bat Star Blasts Yanks

By JCK HAND

New York, April 5 —(AP)— Uncle Sam continued to shape the 1945 pennant races today as threatened loss of First Baseman Nick Etten, last year's American League home run champion, struck a body blow at the hopes of the New York Yankees.

Etten's reclassification to 1-A by a Chicago draft board was hardly a surprise to Joe McCarthy. The Yank skipper had expected such tidings and planned accordingly but training on top of similar news on Oscar Grimes and Johnny Lindell's imminent induction it may force considerable shuffling.

If Etten and Lindell go the vaunted Yankee power of bygone days will be strictly a one-man act by George Stirnweiss, 4-F but also up for re-examination. If Grimes also goes, McCarthy will be up against it for a shortstop.

Emerson Roser's six shutout innings in yesterday's 3-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox must have been some comfort to Mayor Joe Cronin as his chances lean heavily on the pitching staff. Roser was of little help in 1944 but could win a regular job with that kind of chucking.

Other training camp items:

Boston Red Sox — Joe Cronin impressed by ground covering ability of Bein Steiner, shifted the rookie to shortstop. Skeeter Newsome will go to third and Jack Tobin to second.

Boston Braves — Bob Coleman having trouble finding best outfield trio of many capable performers. Arrival of Elmer Nieman sent Ballhawk Jeris Gillenwater to bench. At Philadelphia Athletics — Bobo Newsom nominated self to pitch season's opener for Connie Mack in Washington, Told Connie Mack in phone call from Florida training camp at Hartsville, S. C., "I see by the papers where some of the boys ain't been looking so good. Well, I'll be in Baltimore Sunday to work against the Orioles."

Chicago White Sox — Opened exhibition series with 8-0 win over Detroit, rapping Art Houtteman, Leo Mueller and Virgil Trucks for 15 hits in game played under wintry conditions. Bill Dietrich, Ed Lopat and Joe Haynes held Detroit to five blows.

Contract for Pine Bluff Plant 'Out'

Little Rock, April 4 —(AP)— The government contract for an ammunition container plant at Pine Bluff has been cancelled and work on conversion of the old seamanship building there over by the government was halted yesterday, Maj. C. E. Brown, public relations officer of the Little Rock U. S. engineers, announced today.

Senator said the district office was informed by a telephone call from Washington yesterday that the contract had been cancelled. Representatives of the Ammunition Container Corporation, which held the contract, met with the engineers here today to settle details on termination of the contrac.

The plant had scheduled production for June 1, with about 2,000 persons to be employed.

Engineers had begun construction of an office building and under the original contract order had moved about 1,000 of approximately 33,000 bales of government loan cotton stored in the plant building by the Federal Compress and Warehouse Company.

Sonnen said the cotton would be moved back into the building. It had been transferred to other warehouses in Pine Bluff.

Spring Appetites Crave Sweets
BY CAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Staff Writer

Youngsters and oldsters, too, enjoy and thrive on wholesome sweets when spring put a fresh zest in the appetite. Here's a delicious pudding that uses stale bread and brown sugar and spring eggs.

Chocolate Bread Pudding
(Serves 6)

Two squares unsweetened chocolate, 2 cups milk, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup light brown sugar, firmly packed, 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten, 1½ teaspoons vanilla, 6 slices stale bread, cut in ½-inch cubes. For the meringue: 2 egg whites, 4 tablespoons sugar.

Add chocolate to milk and heat in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Add salt. Combine brown sugar and egg yolks; add chocolate mixture gradually, stirring vigorously. Add vanilla. Combine bread and chocolate mixture and let stand 10 to 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Turn into greased baking dish, place in pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until almost set. Beat egg whites until foamy thoroughly; add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating until mixture will stand in peaks. Pile meringue lightly in mounds to form a border around edge of pudding. Sprinkle meringue with shaved chocolate and continue baking 8 minutes longer, or until meringue is delicately browned. Serve warm or cold. May also be baked in individual dishes.

Romaine With an Herb Sauce
(Serves 4)

One large head romaine, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup boiling water, 2 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, 1 bouillon cube.

Wash the romaine well. Cut the white stems separate from the leaves. Cut leaves in several pieces. Add remaining ingredients and simmer covered, until tender and water is absorbed. Serve with a topping of mayonnaise to which a little chili sauce has been added Or serve with a cheese cream sauce.

TOMORROW'S MENU

BREAKFAST: Ready-to-eat wholewheat cereal with sliced bananas, honey buns, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Tomato juice, creamed hard-cooked eggs, romaine salad, seeded rolls, butter or fortified margarine, stewed rhubarb, tea, milk.

DINNER: Codfish cakes, spiced tomato sauce, baked beans, Boston brown bread, butter or fortified margarine, cole slaw garnished with fresh watercress, chocolate bread pudding, coffe, milk.

Washington

(Pinch hitting for Jack Stinnett)

(Miss Lewis, who helped cover the Mexico City Inter-American conference for The Associated Press, tells in this and a following column how such a conference works—how, in fact, the San Francisco United Nations conference may work.)

Washington— Judging from past conferences, the United Nations meeting in San Francisco will be very much like a world-wide political convention.

Just as in conventions, most of the work of a conference is done behind the spotlights instead of out front. The best speeches are often made in hotel rooms.

The last international parley was the meeting of American republics in Mexico City. You can expect about twice as much of the same thing in San Francisco because there will be a few over twice as many countries there.

Nineteen countries were invited to Mexico, and El Salvador arrived about half way through.

Delegates started trickling into town about a week before opening day. The day before the show started it looked as though the convention was being held at the airport and the railroad station.

Conferences invariably begin with a plenary session — oratory, klieg lights, striped pants and gold braid.

Then they settle down to work. In Mexico City and the same may happen in San Francisco — most delegation chiefs lived in one luxurious hotel. If you sat in the lobby or the bar, or walked the corridors along enough, you could button-hole every important diplomat.

Most delegations had meetings at 9 or 9:30 each morning. The diplomats from each country would talk over what they were going to do.

Then the steering committee met, to look over the proposals submitted by each nation and pass them on to committees. That was the way the speaker and the Rules Committee in the U. S. House of Representatives in the U. S. House of Representatives.

After a few open sessions, the commissions broke down into smaller groups. Some wrangled and argued for days to pull different projects into single resolutions.

One economic commission shut itself up in a downtown office building, took the telephone off the hook and had meals sent in. It wound up its work in two days.

Between meetings, important leaders met such as U. S. Secretary of State Stettinius and Mexican Foreign Minister Padilla wandered about paying calls.

This helped create the friendly atmosphere that enabled the diplomats, in more serious discussions, to reach agreement without personal distractions.

Ultimatum to Film Workers Has Expired

Hollywood, April 4, —(AP)— The deadline expired today on an ultimatum by movie producers to 14,000 studio workers, warning them to go back to work or lose their jobs.

Herbert K. Sorrell, president of the conference to studio workers, who called the strike 43 days ago, said the ultimatum would be ignored. He called it an empty threat and said the producers couldn't possibly replace electrical workers, carpenters and machinists with ordinary day laborers.

Coach's Salary Not to Be Discussed by U. of A. Trustees

Little Rock, April 4 —(AP)— The University of Arkansas board of trustees is not expected to act upon 1945 legislation authorized to help pay the Razorbacks' head football coach as much as $12,000 a year when it meets here tomorrow.

A member of the board said last year's first meeting would be purely a reorganization meeting. Four new members of the board were appointed recently by Governor Laney.

Although our air offensive is still only in its early phases, the citizen of Tokyo or Nagoya has already begun to have an inkling of the cost and destructiveness of modern war. In the not-too-distant future he will be impressed with its full meaning.—Asst. Gen. Henry H. Arnold.

Fulton Officer Rewarded for Manila Rescue

Capt. Jesse Lawton Walters, native of Fulton now in the Philippines, has written his mother, Mrs. J. C. Walters of Fulton, as follows:

"Last week my company (member of a tank battalion) was presented a large silver loving cup by the internees of Santo Tomas as an appreciation gift of our liberating them. We had quite a big ceremony, speeches, newspaper reporters and photographers.

"I received the cup. It's a large thing and really beautiful one. Perhaps I can show it to you later.

"Today, March 30, we had a parade, and decorations and awards were given out. I'm glad to say that of the 11 decorated men several were from my company, and the other four had been with me on the march and were recommended by me."

It was Captain Walters who drove his "33" Sherman" tank through the gates and liberated 1,100 prisoners in Santo Tomas prison camp near Manila February 3, 1945.

Arkansas Sportettes

By CARL BELL

Little Rock, April 5 —(AP)— It's too early to adjudge quality, but if size and quantity mean anything, the Little Rock Travelers will lack little in the 1945 Southern Association pennant race.

A total of 30 recs turned out for the Rocks' initial drill early this week, and exactly half of them were hurlers. More moundsmen are expected momentarily and belief is that several 1944 vets now getting a chance in major league camps will be back here before the season is very old.

Size? In keeping with Traveler tradition, not a flinger now on hand is less than six feet tall.
